

Dr. Mohammed Abdel Hakim Aref Farrah

Mohammed Abdel Hakim Farrah, Associate Professor of English Language Studies, graduated with a BA from Hebron University in 1994 in English Language and Literature, MA in TESOL from International Islamic University in Malaysia in 1999, Ph.D. in English Language Studies in 2006 from International Islamic University in Malaysia. There are a number of publications in the field of online learning and online communication and collaborative learning and peer feedback in writing and types of feedback. He supervised ten MA theses at Hebron University and was an examiner for other 15 MA theses. Administrative positions included Chair of the English Department from 2009 until 2013, Editorial Secretary of Hebron University Research Journal from 2007 until the present time, and presented a number of papers in local and international conferences. He is on the Advisory Board of Arab World English Journal (AWEJ), Executive Board of the Arab Society of English Language Studies (ASELS), and an active member in the APETAU Association.

In the Erasmus plus project (2015-2018), Farrah acts as the coordinator of Work Package 4: Capacity Building in Higher Education Pedagogy, and a team member of Work Package 1: BA Primary Education Degree Programmes.

As part of the Language Arts Pre-service Teacher Education Development Program (2009-2012), Farrah worked as a consultant for the World Bank and on the development of the Program outputs (curriculum framework, intended learning outcomes, course descriptions, teaching strategies manuals, ICT materials, Quality Assurance Plan for the project).